Banff School of Fine Arts

Sometimes referred to as "the campus in the clouds," the Banff School of Fine Arts and Centre for Continuing Education, has the most breathtaking setting of any university campus in Canada, possibly the world, and it is a campus of the University of Alberta.

It all started thirty-three years ago when a School in the Arts Related to the Theatre was established at Banff and affiliated with the University of Alberta. In 1936 Donald Cameron, then director of the University's Department of Extension, became director of the Banff School of Fine Arts and has been its director ever since.

This year, the school celebrated the 33rd Annual Summer Festival of the Arts. Some 1,000 students from Canada, the United States, and various countries abroad have congregated at this renowned mountain retreat to attend courses which may be taken for University Credit, Banff School Certificates, or simply for recreation and pleasure. They attend courses in Theatre Arts and Musical Theatre; Ballet; Music; Painting; Play and Short Stories, TV and Radio Writing; Journalism and Literature; Handicrafts; Modern Languages; Photography; and Figure Skating. Some of this year's distinguished staff members are from the Edmonton campus - Professors H.G. Glyde and Harry Wohlfarth (Art); Professors Thomas Rolston and Sandra Munn (Music); and Professor George Melnikov (French).

Upon visiting the school one cannot fail to catch the enthusiasm of Senator Cameron, his able staff, and the students, for this marvelous and world-renowned school. One wakes in the morning to a spectacular view of Banff and the surrounding panorama of the Rocky Mountains, and to top it off, the sounds of an operatic aria, a piano concerto, or a string solo are in the air. Classes are held from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and this year a student delegation approached Senator Cameron asking that classes be extended from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Scholarship Night at the Banff School of Fine Arts is one of the highlights of the Summer Session. This is the night when the donors of scholarships and prizes, tenable in the current session, personally present them to the successful candidates. Approximately one student in every five attending the Banff School of Fine Arts is the recipient of one of these scholarships. Many receive more than one. This year 186 such scholarships totalling more than $35,000 were presented to students from as far away as Sweden. Past scholarship winners have gone on to star in such fields as the Stratford Festival, opera (Joan Sutherland was one of these stars), ballet companies including the Royal Ballet, movies, and radio. Hundreds of others are contributing leadership in cultural fields and communities throughout Canada.

Scholarship Night 1965 held July 23rd at the Banff School was a memorable occasion. At that time President Walter H. Johns presented the University of Alberta National Award in Letters to Dr. Will R. Bird of Halifax. Dr. Bird is a well-known Canadian author whose flair for bringing the historical past alive, both in fiction and non-fiction writings, has brought him national acclaim.

The Awards presentations were followed by an exciting concert which illustrated the many fine talents of students attending the school. Hard work, initiative and drive are three basic ingredients for a successful student at the School. In the words of Senator Cameron, "one of the basic lessons which students learn at the Banff School of Fine Arts is that there are no shortcuts to perfection."

Faculty Notes

slavonic languages

O. STARCHUK The University of Alberta will become the only University on the North American continent to have microfilm material of eastern Slavonic medieval literature from the earliest times, and literature of the 18th century including Church Slavonic publications, and early Ukrainian, Russian and White-Russian literature. This achievement is the result of many years of correspondence between PROFESSOR O. STARCHUK of the University of Alberta and Mr. I. Chernenko, Director of the Public Library of the Academy of Sciences in Kiev.

Formerly the University had an exchange agreement with the Academy of Sciences in Kiev whereby the University received current Soviet publications and some 19th century material in exchange for English-language publications and current periodicals in the humanities, social sciences, and basic sciences. But, no institution outside the Soviet Union was given material dealing with eastern Slavonic linguistics and literary works of the medieval period, due to scarcity.

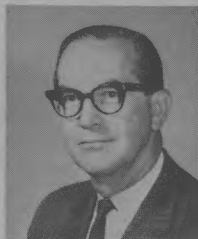

The acquisition of this unique microfilm collection at the University of Alberta will greatly stimulate Slavonic philological and linguistic studies at the Edmonton campus and will attract graduate students interested in medieval studies in the Slavonic field. It is also likely that other schools interested in medieval studies will benefit from these holdings.

Professor Starchuk expects the first shipment of microfilm materials to arrive from Kiev in the late fall. They will be of a great deal of interest to the departments of Classics, History, and Slavonic Languages, and, according to Dr. R. J. Buck, Head of the Department of Classics, they will help a great deal in developing Byzantine studies at the University of Alberta.

psychiatry

DR. K. A. YONGE, Head of the Dept. of Psychiatry, has been named the Sandoz Travelling Professor for 1965-66. In this capacity he will deliver lectures in psychiatry at seven Canadian universities during the next year.

sociology

DRS. C. S. BRANT and C. W. HOBART, both of the Department of Sociology, have recently returned from approximately two months in Denmark and Greenland. They were engaged in a research project on Eskimo education, supported by grants from the Boreal Institute, University of Alberta, and the Department of Northern Affairs. According to Dr. Brant, previous work in the Canadian Arctic and in Alaska on Eskimo education and its relation to social change had indicated a number of critical factors and problems in the programs in those regions. The object of this research program was to obtain comparative data on the program operated by Denmark in Greenland. Following several days of consultation with officials and administrators in the Ministry for Greenland in Copenhagen, the two men spent six weeks interviewing teachers, parents, pupils, and administrators in several regions of Greenland. They are now planning a preliminary report comparing Greenland with Canada and Alaska and indicate that they hope to continue this project over the next year or two.
